ABOUT ME

Hello! I'm a web designer and developer from Kolkata located at the eastern part of India. Web design is my passion and crafting the static designs to life with development never cease to amaze me. I'm very much interested in human interactions with design. Design for me is not only something beautiful; it's a mode of communication. I'm a firm believer in the concept of 'less is more'. My philosophy towards design is very strategic, because I believe that every element in a design piece has a purpose to serve. As a web designer and developer, I find my work as much creative as strategic. I love to solve complex design challenges.

In my free time, I love to browse through the internet and read interesting articles. I am a food lover and love to explore cuisines from different lands. I love to travel and travelling to me is not just visiting the place and admire its scenic beauty. I also love exploring people, their culture, tradition, foods, and way of living. Each terrain is different and how they influence & mould the human lives is something that I love to explore when I visit a place. As a person, I am very quiet, and observant of my surrounding. As a privileged member of the society, I love to give back to those who are not. I am a proud member of "Care India Trust". Where we work to empower needy women and provide children with the basic needs of life and education.
